

Red Lick RUN

The Safety Group lies on the west side of North Fork creek, on the North Slope near the head of the first hollow south of the mouth of Red Lick run. Stahlman notes that the group is in the shape of a bow about 660 feet long. Of the 9 listed rocks in this group, Due Order, Sling and Fairness are possibly situated on the north end of the group in an area of heavy tree growth and downfalls and as yet remain undiscovered.

Along the old narrow gauge bed running along the west bank of the North Fork are several boulders called the Settler's Rocks inscribed with numerous names and dates apparently relating to visitors or workmen within the valley.
